Login 2003

The first edition of Login for 2003 comes to you the members with a few changes to previous editions. Like most organisations and associations ECAWA is keen to give its members the best value for your membership dollar and where possible minimise its costs. The largest budgetary consideration for ECAWA members are the three editions of Login that each financial year are provided to you as an integral part of your membership.

Many articles received for publication run into some six or seven pages and when edited pages are omitted and paragraphs trimmed to save space, it inevitably leads one not to get the full story. This year in adapting a slightly different approach we want to highlight all the happenings in the ECAWA community and provide an opportunity for our members and guest contributors to get published. Hence we are putting together a Web Supplement which will have a presence on our home site. Larger articles will be published in their entirety and placed on our web site along with the edition of Login. There will an introduction to the articles provided in the Login edition.

Along with these articles you may from time to time find a list of groups, people or companies who have supported our association along the way. In our first web supplement we mention PC Locs, B & H Australia and LanWest Pty Ltd who took the opportunity to provide the organisers of the recent Big Day Out at Newman College with equipment and door prizes for our participants.

Place in your diary the dates for our 2003 conference. Lynley McKernan the conference convenor and her team have been hard at work to make this year's two day event one not to miss. A call for sponsors and presenters is not far away.

Educator of the Year

It's time for you to consider nominating a colleague for the Western Australian Educator of the Year. This educator must be an ECAWA member who, through the use of computer technology, has made an outstanding contribution to the education advancement of their students and has had a significant positive effect on their colleagues, both at the school level and within professional organizations. To be considered for ECAWA's Educator of the Year, people may be nominated by their peers or can nominate themselves. Nominees must be based in a school and considered a member of that school's teaching staff.
